It is very lonely at night and the food is poor and very little of it. This morning all we got was one spoonful of half-cooked rice and the coffee tasted like burning rags. This noon at mess all we got was burnt beans and a very few of them, with hard tack, not the kind you buy at the store, but more like dog biscuit. Next week, Company G, my company, will go on a scouting trip to the north to search a Mexican town for rifes and weapons of any kind. The heat here is intense, 118 to 125 in the sinde of the tent, and the rain here is fierce; our tents get flooded. Then it is a case of taking a wash basin and balling out the water and mud. It makes us wish for home sweet heme. The march we have next week takes us across a desert where we have to carry our own water. A quart of water must last us 15 miles, and we must make three miles in 45 minutes with a 15-minute rest. Our food hair and clothes get full of sand.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and musified coccanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and as few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich creamy lather, way and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.
